(2) Business Restriction, Pros and Cons Caused by Being in Affiliated Company Groups

Our group runs businesses different from the affiliated company groups. In addition, our transaction volume with the affiliated company groups is minimal such as soft drink sales from us and system maintenance to us. As such, we consider that we are not in the position where our free business activities are impeded from the affiliated company groups.

(3) Measures to Ensure Independence from Affiliated Company Groups

There is a member of Ricoh Co., who sits on our board; he is merely one of the 10 directors, representing far less than a half of the board. As such, we at CCW execute business operations by using our own judgment and making decisions on our own volition. Therefore, we believe that we are in a position to make independent business decisions without being significantly influenced by the said company.

(4) Independence from Affiliated Company Groups

CCW has close personnel and capital ties with Ricoh Co., Ltd.; however, CCW's business activities and management judgment are completely under CCW's decision. This ensures the independence of CCW.

3. Transactions with Controlling Shareholder
